Born on April 1, 1956, in Rio Hondo, Texas, Hilda was a woman of remarkable humility and boundless joy.

From an early age, she displayed a genuine and unassuming nature, always putting others before herself.

Her humility endeared her to everyone she met, and she touched countless lives with her selfless acts of kindness.

Growing up in a loving and supportive family, Hilda was instilled with values of hard work and perseverance. Becoming the first in her family to attend college, she seized the opportunity to attend

Texas Woman's University, where passion for teaching flourished, and she earned a Masters in Education. This achievement marked the beginning of a remarkable career that would impact the lives of countless students.

Her loving bond with her two sisters, Raquel and Elizabeth, was a source of strength and happiness throughout her life. Together, they formed an inseparable trio, supporting each other through life's ups and downs and creating cherished memories that will be treasured forever.

Hilda lived life with an infectious joy that radiated from her smile and laughter. She found happiness in the simplest of things, whether it was caring for her beloved doggies, working in the garden, or creating beautiful crochet pieces. Her zest for life was truly contagious, and she taught those around her the value of finding joy in everyday moments.

Her boundless imagination was a beacon of inspiration to those around her. With a creative mind that knew no limits, she would dream up stories that transported both children and adults to enchanting realms. Her storytelling sessions were a cherished tradition, filled with laughter, awe, and a sense of wonder.

Above all, Hilda's greatest joy came from spending time with her family. She held a special place in her heart for her nieces and nephews. Hilda was not only a devoted aunt but a second mother to David,

Adrian, Audrey, and Andrew. With unwavering patience and a heart full of unconditional love, she embraced her role as a guiding figure in their lives. She showered them with affection and understanding, offering a listening ear and a comforting embrace whenever they needed it.
